GEORGETOWN, Guiana, July 5 (AP).—Passengers on a Cruzeiro do Sui afriiner sang and loked as the plane was being hijacked to Cuba-but they stopped quickly enough when the hijacker, gun in hand, told them to be quiet if they wanted to live. Seventeen passengers, who were dropped off at Timehrl airport here, said yesterday that the hijacker was middle-aged and told them that his name was Jacques.

The plane, after refuelling at Timehri, took off again with the hijacker and six crew members aboard. It landed at Santiago de Cuba today.

Wagner Jodein, a 20-year-old engineering student who was among the 46 passengers aboard the plane, said that 15 minutes after it took off from Belem, Brazil, the hijacker, sitting next to him, left his seat. When he returned, he announced that the plane was being hijacked.

Twenty-eight passengers, mainly married couples, were put off in Cayenne. French Guiana. The plane then arrived at There the hijacker ordered the plane to be refueled before he allowed passengers to disembark. The plane then took off on its way to Cuba.

New Henze Work Is Hailed At Performance in Spoleto

SPOLETO, Italy. - The Festival of Two Worlds has presented a new work by the German composer Hans Werner Henze, "El Cimarron" (The Runaway Slave), written last winter in Cubs and based on a German text by the poet Hans Magnus Enzemberger.

Henze calls his work "a recital for four musicians," a baritone, a flutist, a guitarist and a per cussionist. As might be expected from Henze's previous works, the piece is both theatrical and musically daring. The audience at the first performance Friday received it with enthusiasm. El Cimarron, a 104-year-old

Negro living in 1963 in a veteran's home in Havana, became known through a taped antobiography. The ex-slave described his childhood, forced labor in the cane fields, his escape, alone in the forests emancipation, adventures in love and in the 1895-98 war for Cuban independence. Enzensberger chose and adapted the 15 episodes that make up the recital To describe the piece as a recital seems to be a caution on Henze's part to avoid comparison with theatrical works, although the composer says the work is something between concert music and the theater. But lighting and the mobility of the musicians on the stage, with the occasional dancing of the vocalist, partially prevent the music's being the action, as the composer says was intended Comparison with rock music is suggested by the make-up of the ensemble, the electrical instruments and the amplification. Henze's description of the piece as a recital did not prevent, despite the excellent performance, slight regret that the full strength of the piece was not achieved. Individually, the musicians were good. William

Pearson, a haritone born in Tennessee but long resident in Germany, has a handsome voice that early ranges from bassbaritone to falsetto countertenor. His diction was good, although cometimes important words seemed to lack the necessary intensity or the phrasing was slightly off.

The German flutist, Karlheinz Zöller and the guitarist, Leo Brouwer, a Cuban, were fine. Brouwer's especially forceful presence gave a large part of the cohesiveness of the performance. Stomu Yamasha, the Japanese percussionist, had an awesome vitality and agility in handling his large number of

The libretto's limitation resuits from the single vision of the ex-slave. Somehow his solitude works against any feeling that he was participating in a collective reaction to slavery or exploitation.

The musical score involves, hesides the basic 12-tone sounds, traditional melody, improvise-tions, shouts, laughter, and simple and complex rhythmical values. Chromatic tensions are eased for short intervals by passages of liturgical, love, and folk music. The variety of instruments covers flutes with modern medifications to Japanese prayer bells and log drums.

The rbythms are exciting in the parts dealing with life in the forest, with the revolt against the Spanish and the independence that followed. But the listener is thrown back to the recital over and over again, whether as narration, spare and neat, perhaps too frequently colorless in its structural limitations, or as a musical program. The piece is more than a recital, and requires a louder sound than was given Friday, but it did excite, despite a kind of dryness throughout.

After Cambodia, Any 'Deal' in Sight?

By Robert B. Semple Jr. SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. Studio in which Richard Nixon sation" with three television reporters Wednesday night is regularly given over to a show called "Let's Make a Deal."

This was modestly appropriate, because when all was said and done—the "back-grounders," the briefings, the "final" written report to the country on Cambodia, the TV appearance itself-that is essentially what Mr. Nixon was asking the enemy in Indochina

On Tuesday, using about 7,000 words, Mr. Nixon summarized the results of the Camed it a stunning tactical suc-cess. On Wednesday night, he went further and said that the operation had "changed the mil-itary balance," and it was clear from what he said then and at every other point during the long and busy week here that he felt the time had come for the enemy to strike a bargain that would 'humiliate" no one and yield as moch prestige as either side wished to claim.

'To further demonstrate good faith, be named David K. E. Bruce, 72, a diplomat of impeccable qualifications with a Demneratic pedigree and mildly dovish leanings to run the U.S. delegation at the Paris peace talks. Which means that the delegation will have = prestigious and internationally known figure in charge for the first time since Henry Cabot Lodge's departure from Paris

U.S. Flexible

Mr. Nixon did not publicly give his new man any blg new diplomatic chips to play, but he said the United States remained "flexible" and his senior associates here made it very plain that the administration would accept any deal short of abandoning the Saigon regime in advance of negotiations, In fact, the administration appeared to be softening its negotiating position. In the past the United States has seemed to reject the idea of a coalition government for South Vietnam prior to the bolding of free elec-tions there—a long-standing Communist demand. Last week a State Department official said the United States would be willing at least to consider formation of a coalition government that would include the Vietnamese Communists, and hold "preliminary discussions" on the idea with Hanol.

Mr. Nixon did not claim that the Bruce appointment would necessarily inspire the Communists to dispatch someone of comparable standing to Paris and start working out a settlement next week.

His associate even allowed for a "spectacular" show of strength Communist ground forces in July or August, But they clearly hoped that in the end Hanoi would somehow grasp the logic of bargaining with an enemy that is on the defensive and in retreat, and nobody put his cur-ious case better than the President himself in his television appearance.

'If ... the enemy feels that we are going to stay there long enough for the South Vietnamese to be strong enough to handle their own defense, then I think they have a real incentive to negotiate, because if they have to negotiate with a strong, Vigorous South Vietnamese Government, the deal they can make with them isn't going to be as good as the deal they might make now."

Setback for Communists

The question, of course, was whether after all this the Communists would play by Mr. Nixon's rules and succumb to his logic. There is no doubt that Cambodia burt them, but they have been badly hurt before, and they have still managed to wage a relentless war of attrition for 25 years. As one of Mr. Nixon's aides put it last week, Hanol bas only one foreign policy, and that concerns Vietnam.

Mr. Nixon himself admitted that unless Hanol came to the negotiating table to bargain, it would not be possible to claim Cambodia as a "decisive" vic-tory. The most that could be said for it was that it had been by the President's own calculations an impressive show in the short run. In military terms, it had swept up tons of enemy material, greatly improved the morale of the South Vietnamese troops and purchased crucial time in which they might increase their own capabilities, and relieved some of the pressure on the beleaguered Cambodian government in

In diplomatic terms, his as-sociates felt, it had joited the other non-Communist nations of Asia into an embryonic effort to confront their common defense requirements; and brought negotiations closer by suggesting that the President, despite his desire to remove all U.S. troops from Vietnam someday, is not incapable of an unpredictable gesture or two to demonstrate his resolve and improve his credibility not only in Hanoi but in Peking and Mos-bodia might not be the last

The Story of the Budget Since the Korean War

Difference between estimated and actual budget surplus or deficit in billions of dollars

President Nixon last week faced a mounting problem: Congress was adding more than $7-billion to the $1.3-billion budget deficit he originally proposed for this fiscal year. The fate of other Presidential budgets, with Congress not always responsible for the swings, is shown above.

It Might Increase by $7 Billion

Nixon Proposes, Congress Disposes And the Budget Deficit Burgeons

By Edwin L. Dale Jr.

WASHINGTON (NYT) —Last W January, when President Nixon was in the final, painful stages of deciding upon his budget, he was urged by such advisers as Arthur F. Burns to rely as little upon Congress as possible for unpopular fiscal

It was obviously good advice. The American Congress, without really intending to, has become a vehicle for raising some spending items, and declining to cut others and refusing to raise

In the view of political scientists, economists and, above all, presidents. Congress has no way of taking an overview of what its innumerable separate actions and inactions, coming from separate committees and power centers, are doing to the Presicent's bodget and hence to his fiscal policy.

This became dramatically clear last week: A box score by the once obscure but now important Joint Committee on Reduction of Federal Expenditures showed that Congress is well on its way adding more than $7-billion to the budget deficit in the fiscal year that has just begun,

Returning to January for the moment, the President largely took the advice given him. At that time he asked for no unpopular taxes and, on the spending side, he asked Congress to enact reductions amounting to less than $1-billion. He did ask for a modest postal rate increase, including a seven-cent rate for first class.

After January, however, the roof fell in. The postal strike led to a big federal pay raise: Estimates of some uncontrollable expenditures, such as interest on the debt, had to be increased.

The result was that he had to ask Congress for an eight-cent stamp, and an overall postal rate increase of $1.6-billlon, a $1.5-billion increase in estate and gift taxes through faster collections, and a new $1.5-billion tax on the lead in gasoline. Congress has shown zero action on all three.

Valid Excuses

There are plenty of seemingly valid excuses. A good example —cited again last week by Sen. William Proxmire, D., Wisc., who strongly favors a budget surplus—is the argument that it is wrong to raise first-class mail rates because first class pays its way. But in the meantime, the budget drifts into massive

In addition, Congress, as might have been expected, is doing little to "restructure" old programs to save money, as the President had asked in such areas as agriculture, veterans benefits and the school milk program. And finally, in several important appropriation and anthorization bills, chiefly health and education; Congress is on the way to forcing a mandatory spending increase upon the President.

The most dramatic move on this front came last week when the Senate, following a previous action by the House, voted to override the President's veto of the hospital construction hill. which contains a provision that he must spend all money appropriated in this and several other health areas.

Futile Pleas

All of this was going on despite the latest futile presidential plea, contained in his economic address to the nation June 17: "To curb inflationary pressures throughout our economy, I call upon the Congress to join me in holding down government spending to avoid a large budget deficit. This requires a new restraint on spending programs and the passage of the revenue-producing proposals I have made.". Robert P. Mayo, the outgoing budget director, put the basic problem gently but firmly in testimony earlier this year: "The fiscal responsibility of this administration and our concern for the dangers of the inflation have clearly been demonstrated by specific actions to restrain federal spending. It is clear that Congress matches this concern about spending in total but.

unfortunately, has not been able to match its actions on specifics with this concern. . "The system . . . allows mem-bers to be for spending—on individual appropriations and other legislative matters-and for saving, on the aggregate ceiling, at the same time." Congress obviously likes it that way. Some of the more thoughtful members recognize the problem but defend themselves by saying they will vote to cut defense spending, as they will. But unless a major reduction is actually enacted in this area—as well as in others such as space and foreign aid—the net result of this Congress's action and inactions will be to turn a modest and, in most views, economically appropriate, deficit of $1.3-billion, as pro-posed by the President, into one as high as $10-billion. And nobody knows what to

Toward Mideast Peace

Moscow Budges a Bit Raising West's Hopes

By James F. Clarity

MOSCOW (NYT). — Since Israel's thorough defeat of Soviet-equipped Arab forces in the June 1967 war, the Soviet Union had assumed a position of steely infransigence regarding the settlement of continuingmilitary clashes in the Middle East; Almost every proposal by major Western powers toward a settlement has been quickly and bluntly rejected. The Soviet Union the United States, Britain and France have met repeatedly on the situation—and to no avail. Negotiations hit rock bottom last December, when the Russians rejected a plan offered as "balanced" by Secretary of State William P. Rogers. A sub-sequent plan offered by the French was accorded a slightly more encouraging Soviet reply:

In Moscow, the Kremiin line: was echoed almost daily in the press and by Russian officials at diplomatic receptions. The only acceptable settlement must be based on the Nov. 22, 1967, resolution of the United Nations Security Council, which called for Israeli withdrawal from all occupied territory, recognized the right of all nations in the Middle East to secure bound-aries, proposed freedom of navigation in the Suez Canal and other waterways, and urged set-tlement of the touchy refugee problem.

Then, in the last week of June, without warning, the atmosphere of ennul that pervades most of the Western diplomatic community here was plerced by the rarest of phemonena: evidence that the Kremlin had decided to move however slightly, off a set position.

The Soviet policy—any settlement must be based on the United Nations resolution—remained essentially the same, but the Soviet approach to such a settlement appeared to Western diplomats here to have become more flexible.

'Formal State'

This new flexibility surfaced quickly in New York. The Kremlin. diplomats said, was pro-posing a Tormal state of peace." between Israel and the Arab states, possibly as preparation for negotiations between the two sides at some stage before the completion of Israeli withdrawal from occupied territory.

The significance of the shift was that whereas Israel demands a formal peace treaty, the Russians hitherto had backed the Arab refusal to go be-youd a unliateral statement of pacific intent. A "formal state of peace," though still falling short of a treaty negotiated and signed by the parties to the war, would presumably be formally reported to the United Nations and be more legally binding than the less formal procedure en-visaged hitherto by the Arabs.

Basically, Soviet Middle East policy calls for the maintenance of Russian influence in Arab affairs, while averting another full-scale Arab-Israeli war that could cost the Kremlin dearly in rubles and prestige.

Western analysts here felt that it was too soon last week to divine whether the Soviet flexibility of approach to settlement would be translated into flexibility of Soviet policy. But the experts agreed that the Soviet propossi was evidence that Moscow will not immediately reject the newest plan put forward by Mr. Rogers. The plan has not been publicly disclosed in full but is known to include a cease-fire and negotiations. probably indirect, between the Arabs and Israelis,

Although Israeli Premier Golda Meir and President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic have expressed strong reservations nn the Rogers proposals, diplomats feel they have not irrevocably rejected them. More significant, the diplomats say, is that Soviet authorities have been virtually silent on the new American

Mr. Nasser was in Moscow last week and getting the red carpet treatment. He was met at the airport on Monday by President Nikolai Podgorny, Premier Alexel Kosygin and other Soviet notables. At a Kremlin reception for space-endurance champions Andrian Nikolayev and Vitaly Sevastyanov last Friday he presented the pair with Egypt's highest award, the "Necklace of the Nile."

What transpired in the political talks he came for was, as always in such circumstances in Moscow, impossible to tell Mr. Podgorny and Mr. Nasser boll: unlesshed pro forms denunciations of Israeli and imperialist "aggressors," but both said the favored a nonviolent Middle East-settlement: ----

In general, Western diplomats feel the Kremlin wants a clearer understanding of exactly how far Mr. Nasser might be prepared to compromise, however slightly. The Egyptian President in turn, is expected to examine the military and political impli-

First, Cambodian officials reported U.S. support during a battle at Kompong Thom, a provincial capital about 100 miles from the nearest point on the South Vietnamese border which is nearly five times the 21.7-mile limit the President set on penetration by the now departed U.S. ground troops. Then, a few days ago, a Cambodian military spokesman re-ported "allied" air support at Phnom Krom, a town in the far northwest seized early last week by the Communists. Asked what "allied" planes meant, the spokesman said, "American and South Vietnamese."

Phnom Krom Is about 80 miles from the border with Thailand and about 100 from the South Vietnamese frontier. The nearest U.S. air base is at Ubon, 55 miles inside Thalland.

The Americans are apparently making efforts to keep away from historic monuments, religlous altes and civilians, checking the targets first with the Cambodian government and taking Cambodian airmen along on both the reconnaissance and attack missions.

Administration officials say the main mission of U.S. planes in Cambodia will be to impede the movement of enemy troops and supplies toward South Vietnam and thereby protect the security of U.S. troops there. Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird has added that the bombing of Communist supply routes may have side benefits for Cambodian soldiers engaged in combat.

The question being asked by many thoughtfui Cambodians and foreigners here is whether it will have any lasting benefits for the peace of Cambodia and for its future as an independent

Probable Strikes What follows is a rundown on areas of South Vietnamaccording to the Army's corps designations—where the allies are likely to strike in coming

• In the T Corps, the northern five provinces of the country, the balance of forces has not been affected by allied operations in Cambodia, and the allies now have no more of a tactical advantage than they did two months ago. Yet, a com-bined American and South Vietnamese offensive is expected here.

Allied troops need only go into the coastal foothills in the I Corps area to find large North Vietnamese concent ations. If they decide to go farther west -say, to the A Shau Valley, where such old battlefield favorites as Hamburger Hill have been in North Victnamese hands since last summer—they could stir up a big enough war to create widespread alarm in the United States again about mounting casualties.

• In the II Corps. which encompasses the Central High-lands, there are more unexploited targets than there are allied troops, but an offensive there too is expected. Although the thrusts into Cambodia from this area proved less lucrative than those farther south, allied commanders believe the enemy's preoccupation with getting himself back in order in Cambodia means a tactical advantage for the allies in South Vietnam.

In the III Corps tactical zone, comprising the 11 prov-inces around Salgon, there are many pockets of enemy resistance which allied troops have deferred "cleaning out" because they felt it more vital. to resist infiltration through the northwestern provinces bordering Cambodia. There are densely forested sanctuaries in eastern Phuoc Long, Log Khanh: and Binh Tuy Provinces to "neutralize," and commanders see no better time to get onwith the job.

• In the IV Corps area in the South, in the Mekong Delta, there is a swampy region that for years has been a safe enemy haven. This is the U Minh Forest, which sprawls through Kien Glang, An Xuyen and Chuong Thien Provinces. It has been safe for the enemy because South Vietnamese troops in the past have had their hands full trying to stop inflitration from Cambodia. Now, temporarily at least, the infiltration is no worry and the U Minh Forest is enticing.

'Let's Stop-Lying About Drugs'

Reprinted from Medical Economics.

By Charles C. Dahlberg, M.D.

Dr. Dahlberg, who practices in New York City, is affiliated with the William Alanson White Institute of Psychiatry. He has done considerable research on LSD and other psychedelic drugs.

the National Institute of Mental Health, observed to a U.S. Senate subcommittee last autumn, "that by the continued exaggerated emphasis on the supposed dire evils of marijuana smoking, we make it extremely difficult to tell people what the real risks of use of specific kinds of drugs are." And in Boston, Marion Freedman of the United Community Services tells local drug committees: "You must distinguish between drug use and abuse. I'm not saying that you must teach the pleasures of drugs, but at least you must be honest in explaining their dangers."

Such honesty seems to be rare among us physicians. I believe

Such honesty seems to be rare among us physicians. I believe that we have contributed far more even than the drug apologists to the smokescreen of half-truths, myths, and plain lies that befogs the whole subject of drug use. As a result, the public doesn't know who or what to believe, and those wa want most to reach—young drugheads and edolescents about to experiment with drugs—district us the west. distrust us the most.

The title of this article may be slightly misleading. Though fear for the health and future of our children has motivated most of our misstatements, ignorance has also played a part. Yet, from the mouth of a supposed authority, pretended knowledge is scarcely distinguishable from deliberate lying. Almost anything said initially about a new drug is suspect. If we admitted that and wholeheartedly backed research to determine the truth, our ignorance would be understandable and acceptable. But apparently we can't abide being ignorant where drugs of potential abuse are concerned. So we adhere to a different premise: that anything said about a drug of abuse has to be bad. Otherwise, we fear that we might be charged with condoning or even encouraging drug abuse. Consequently, even the men who know the most keep silent or release only those facts that support the premise.

Damage to Research Efforts

An unfortunate by-product of these lies and distortions is that they can create furors that damage legitimate research efforts. I recently completed a study of the impact of lay publicity on LSD research. Of the 29 researchers surveyed, 19 reported that the publicity had negatively affected their recruitment of subjects, the attitudes of already participating subjects, and the behavior of research personnel. Several researchers had been forced to discontinue their work entirely, and, as you may know, LSD has subsequently been recalled by the sole U.S. pharmaceutical manufacturer that produced it.

Perhaps because it has been such an obvious failure in reachng the youngsters we most want to reach, our policy of "managng the news" of drug abuse is breaking down. More and more loctors and other experts are calling for full disclosure of all known acts about drugs of abuse. Drug education programs being estabished in the schools are following the same line. Yet, setting a new "truth" policy is one thing; dispelling all the half-truths, ijes, and myths is quite another, especially when even some experts repeat them as fact. To show you what I mean, I'll point out 13 of these half-truths and try to supply the other half.

First, let's consider some of the propositions most favored by trug apologists:

• "Psychedelic drugs ease depression." There is some truth in his assertion, but not much. Anxiety, depression, and worry about ne problems of living are often diminished, if not completely cased, during a marijuana "high." Smoke it often enough and ie may remain more or less continuously in this pleasurable ate, although high dosages are dangerous in that they induce streme passivity and withdrawal from society.

Euphoria vs. Depression

For most people, LSD produces a euphoric state that lasts or several hours. Some people enjoy a much milder sense of rell-being for several days after an LSD trip. On the other iand, some LSD experiences are very frightening, and, for some isers, depressing. In fact, I've found that even a "good" LSD aip can produce depression. This is because the drug induces egression. Under LSD, a person may remember events in early seemed painfully important at the time. Even such memories may seem pleasant during the trip, but after the drug-induced feelings of well-heing have worn off, depressive symptoms appear. These, which can also be produced by such other psychedelics as mescaline and STP, may develop into a very severe depression that can be long lasting.

The amphetamines, another class of widely abused drugs, frequently produce a curious phenomenon when they are used over a period of time. The suppression of depressive feelings that occurs during an amphetamine "high" appears to induce a simultaneous build-up of depression. This build-up results in very strong depressive feelings while the person is coming down from his high and for some time after. Far from being eased, tha depressive feelings are simply postponed and then intensified.

Because the drugs depress appetite and prevent sleep, most amphetamine abusers also suffer from some degree of mainutrition, vitamin deficiency, and fatigue. Malnutrition and fatigue can accentuate depression. The combination of all these factorsdepressive build-up, malnutrition and fatigue-can lead to a depression of psychotic magnitude.

Understanding Through Drugs

 "Drugs help me understand the universe and myself." It is true that some drugs can help people to achieve genuine insights. But the user's judgment is severely impaired by such drugs and his suggestibility increased. Hence he's rarely able to distinguish between true insights and false impressious or distortions.
Under LSD, for instance, some people believe they've found tha secret of existence. I know one man who, returning from an LSD trip, declared, "The secret of existence is that the forces of tha universe are flexible." Afterwards the "secret" was totally incomprehensible to him.

I also recall a woman who was quite hung-np on the idea of her own and everybody else's guilt. Under the influence of LSD she perceived that since the death of Christ nearly 2,000 years ago Western society has been punishing itself. The year in which she took LSD was 1967, which she subtracted from 2,000 and got 33, the age of Christ when he died. Therefore, she felt, our burden of guilt is now relieved. Only psychotherapy rid her of this bizarre

Sometimes the LSD insight can be useful, as in the case of a young man who had dropped out of school and taken various jobs as a craftsman. Working closely with other men brought out homosexual fears in him, although he had no history of homosexuality. He came out of his LSD experience convinced that he was actually yearning for an older brother he'd never had-somehody who could be his guide and friend. This insight freed him from his fear of latent homosexuality.

When LSD Is of Value

Some psychiatrists—and I count myself among them—feel that LSD can be of considerable value if accompanied by good sychotherapy. I recall an attractive and intelligent young woman who became my patient because of rather severe depressions wrought on by her relationships with men who rapidly rejected ser. Her mistakes were two. First, she invariably chose detached cen, quite like her father, who didn't want close involvement with nyone. Second, she displayed an extreme possessiveness that was epectally distasteful to this kind of man. Under a small dose of SD that I administered, she sobbed about her father: an somebody who brings you so much happiness bring you so much unhappiness?" She also spoke about a "box of gloom" in the abdomen, signaling the onset of a depression more intense han she'd ever had before because she had returned emotionally o the time when she felt deprived of her father. After about months of therapy she was radically changed, able to find a an she could love and who could love her. Today she's a happy and productiva young woman.

"Drugs help me feel close to people." People who use lyags in groups do frequently feel a sense of community, but le intimately engaged in abnost any other group activity. ing close, moreover, is not the same as being close. Many drug users realize after some time that their sense of being close to other people is baseless. Non-partaking observers of group drug parties have observed that many people are actually "doing their own thing" quite independently of those around them, even though the drug users themselves report intense feelings of closeness.

Youth's Deprived Feeling

Intimacy is important to everyone; it's what makes us human. Whether or not today's youth have actually been more deprived of intimacy than other generations is less important than the fact that they feel more deprived, which is wby they look for a place to belong in the "youth culture" or "drug culture."

Indeed, many youngsters may be aware that, without drugs, the closeness they feel even for their contemporaries is something less than genuine. It is a reality they don't want to face, so they turn on to foster the filusion of closeness. For them, while under the influence of the drug, the illusion may well be real. Frankly, it's impossible to tell: Who knows what two people taking drugs are really feeling, other than what they tell you?

 "Drugs make sex better." None of the drugs commonly abused today are specifically aphrodislacs. All hallucinogenic drugs distort perceptions: One sees, hears, and feels things differently. In a sexual situation, this distortion can cause a concentration of the sexual sensations and create at least an illusion of a more intense or prolonged sexual pleasure. One can never be sure, however, that sensations will change for the better. I've had patients tell me that, under LSD, they've gone dead in the pelvic area.

Some people who take amphetamines in small doses find their In high doses, however, amphetamines may seriously reduce Large doses of heroin decrease the sexual appetite. But in small doses, it may delay ejaculation and so prolong sexual

A Legitimate Human Need?

• "The fact that so many intelligent people use mind-expanding drugs and proselytize for them is proof that they do fulfill a legitimate human need." Nonsense. Proselytization proves nothing except that the proselytizer is convinced, or seeks reassurance in numbers, or has something to sell. The impaired judgment and heightened suggestibility produced by hallucinogenic drugs lead naturally to proselytization.

· Self-transcendence induced by drugs is as valid as selftranscendence achieved by other means." Chemically induced self-transcendence—a sense of union with God or some other universal force-is temporary. At the most it can point the way, hut true self-transcendence-of the kind achieved by the mystics of major religious-is the product of hard work and discipline. I have never known a patient who had a drug-inspired transcendental experience that changed his life. Most of the drug users I know freely admit they take drugs primarily for fun.

So much for some of the leading contentions of the drug apologists. Now let's consider some of the arguments frequently used by the antidrug forces, who seem equally at ease in hedging on the truth to make their points.

The Truth About Heroin

• "One shot of heroin leads inevitably to addiction." Not true, if by addiction wa mean a physical dependence on the drug. Some people may use heroin on weekends, or shoot a certain amount every day, without ever increasing the frequency or quantity.

The corollary to this myth of "instant addiction" is the notion that withdrawal from heroin is necessarily an agonizing experience, replete with nausea, chills, and muscle aches. Actually, as sold today, the drug is so cut by milk sugar, quinine, or baking soda that only 1 or 2 percent is actually heroin. An addict may poison or even kill himself if he happens to get a "deck" with heroin content of more than 30 percent, but the usual withdrawal is more like recovering from a bad cold than a scene out of "The Man With the Golden Arm." Interestingly, heroin addicts believe in this myth of horrible withdrawal horrors as much as anybody, which gives them a rationalization for continuing the habit.

This does not mean, of course, that herom should be viewed lightly. In New York City last year some 900 people, including more than 200 teen-agers, died of the acute narcotism that newspapers call "overdose" and of other heroin-related causes. Heroin addiction is now the leading cause of death among New Yorkers aged 15 to 35.

LSD and Chromosomes

 "LSD will wreck your chromosomes." LSD how often, in what dose, to whom? The evidence is incomplete and quite conflicting. There's reason to think that individuals have different tolerances for drug-induced chromosomal breakage. It's also not known how permanent the damage is when it occurs. Chron some studies are new and there are many, many chemicals that can cause damage. The latest and largest study, reported last November, found no positive evidence that LSD had damaged the white blood cell chromosomes of 37 hospitalized individuals taking the drug. The avidence on the teratogenic effects of ISD is also insufficient. Animal studies show that, when there is a teratogenic effect, it is dose-related, and most likely to occur after very

I think the reports on LSD-many of them conflicting, none of them conclusive—have probably hurt the medical profession's credibility about drugs as much as any other single factor. I've seen the situation described in one underground periodical as seen the situation described in the management of the great chromosome hoax." "Hoax" may be too strong a word since it denotes intentional trickery, but the consequences have been the same.

• "LSD and other psychedelic drugs have no clinical use."

Perhaps. Well-trained investigators are still trying to discover what the LSD process is all about and whether it has any clinical value. As noted earlier, I think that LSD has potential as a psychotherapeutic adjunct when carefully used

In Treatment of Alcoholism

There is also fairly convincing evidence for the use of LSD in treating chronic alcoholism. Recent studies at the Maryland Psychiatric Research Center have found that, while LSD alone is not effective in treating alcoholics, the drug is helpful as part of a "total push" program involving psychotherapy, family counseling, and good follow-up. The results of this study, in which one or two large doses of LSD were used to provide a psychedelic experience, are stift holding up.

Promising results have also been obtained from using LSD in the management of terminal cancer patients. It was found in the management of terminal cancer patients. It was found that many people went much more peacefully to their deaths under a regimen that included LSD. They denied their illness far less, and also used less in the way of pain-killing drugs.

far less, and also used less in the way of pain-killing drugs.

There are no final answers because research with LSD is still in its infancy, but we won't find the answers by dismissing LSD as a "bad" drug. No drug is good or bad in itself.

"Drug abuse is simply an expression of revolt by the disaffected." "Simply" makes it sound as if this revolt is a minor matter and can be taken lightly. If revolt it is, it's a pretty serious business and means there is a great deal of disaffection. What we must ask ourselves is, "Why are so many young peopla disaffected?"

One reason is that we have more time to feel disaffected and lonely. Because of our affluence, the pressure on youth to accept responsibility is much less than it used to be. One result is the phenomenon of the 25-year-old adolescent.

Role of the Vietnam War

Alienation and drug abuse have also been attributed to the Vietnam war. Yet the same problems exist among Europeans, who are not involved in the war. Perhaps it's a triumph of American know-how, but generally we've been ahead of the rest of the world in drug abuse; other countries seem to be catching up with us, though.

"Most drugs are addicting or at least lead to a psychological dependancy." Not true. Genuine addiction comparable to that produced by opiates and barbiturates does not occur with the stimulants, hallucinogens, and some sedatives. As for the concept of psychological dependency, it seems fuzzy to me. Certainly any drug that leads to some sort of good feeling is likely to cause a degree of psychological dependence. But one need only think about products containing caffeine to wonder about how seriously psychological dependence should be taken.

One of the criteria of addiction is that of physiological changes upon withdrawal—as shown by EEG changes, for example. Let's consider this criterion in respect to moderate doses of amphetamines. Even though withdrawal will show EEG changes, which make it conform to e standard criterion of addiction, it doesn't produce much in the way of clinical signs and symptoms. So all the doctor has is a squiggle on a piece of paper that conforms to an arbitrary definition. This is why, I think, there's a tendency to get away from this kind of terminology and just say "drug-dependent."

Aggressive-Making Drugs

Trugs lead to aggression." Occasionally but not inevitably. Alcohol and stimulant drugs such as the amphetamines sometimes produce aggressive behavior. The mean drunk is a well-known phenomenon, and hyper-irritability is common among aniphetamine abusers. But barbiturates tend to dissolve hostility. The heroin addict when he has his drug is a peaceful and somewhat somnolent person. Under LSD, aggression occurs only as a result of great provocation. In most cases, the LSD trip is truly one of love, although the user tends to be rather withdrawn. By love, I mean that people usually feel wonderful. Why else would they take it? Why else would they want other

As for cannabis, people can set themselves up to be aggressive with marijuana or hashish, but this is a matter of the setting controlling the action.

The trouble with all these drugs is not that they lead to aggression but that they lead away from life. Somebody may feel full of love on an LSD trip, for instance, but eventually he must return to the pressures, tensions, perhaps even lovelessness of the workeday world. I doubt that the residue of his LSD trip will carry him through; it might even make it more difficult for him to face reality.

Do Drugs Make Criminals?

• "Drugheads become criminals." Sometimes true, but it dapends upon the drug. Certainly there is a clear link between heroin and the stealing and prostitution by which addicts support their habits. "Soft" drug users often become indolent, incapable of holding a job, and turn to drug dealing. Many do it for a living, but not all. I had a millionaire patient who dealt in drugs because it was exciting—cops-and-robbers stuff. He was outraged when he was caught. "Why did you bust me?" he asked the police. "We had to because you were so open about it," they told him.
"You ran the operation like an A. & P." I don't know how much his own drug habits influenced his business acumen, but obviously he made an incompetent dealer.

While the heroin addict will persist in criminal acts to support his addiction, a soft drug user will not necessarily persist in his drug usage. After a few years, I've noticed, the soft drug user's interest in drugs tends to slack off. There are several reasons. For one, the kicks are no longer what they once were: The ups are not as high, and the downs are lower. He also sees that drugs aren't leading him anywhere, and he begins to wonder what's ahead of him. He looks around and sees friends sick from drugs or drug-related diseases such as hepatitis. He looks with fresh eyes upon his squalid surroundings, and remembers the comforts of home. These experiences and observations make dropping in more appealing than dropping out.

Drug abusers should be encouraged to this end, but not by treating them like criminals. Most often, that only hinders re-habilitation. What they need is re-education and the kind of supportive care given to any other patient recovering fre a long

Nixon's Mideast Warning

President Nixon'e comparison of the intentions, reaching beyond a possible Arab-Middle East to the pre-World War I Balkans, where the two euperpowers could be drawn into a confrontation that neither of them wants, lies at the heart of the danger-and the hope for peace—in that troubled area, The threat of a collision of the United States and the Soviet Union makes the Middle East, as the President noted more dangerous than Vietnam. But the desire of both countries to avoid that collision has led Moscow and Washington to make new peace proposals in recent weeks. The question now is whether they will follow through in the concerted effort that alone can bring the contesting parties to terms.

The consequences of failure have been brought home to Americans, and to Moscow, by a succession of White House press briefings over the past week. The focal point to emerge from these discussions is the new strategic situation the Nixon administration sees emerging in the Mideast as a result of the recent arrival of 100 Soviet combat pilote in Egypt on top of new surface-air missiles and the massive arms aid of the past three years.

Almost overnight, as the White House sees it, the arrival of Soviet pilots has offset Israel's air supremacy. A continued Soviet build-up might alter the balance of power not only between Israel and the Arabs but hetween East and West as a whole in the region. It might require not only resumption of jet aircraft deliveries to Israel but, White House officials imply, some increase in the American military presence in the Eastern Mediterranean area and arms aid to moderate Arab regimes.

Soviet pilots may have been moved into Egypt initially to keep President Nasser from being overthrown after Israel's deeppenetration raids last winter. But their presence has sent out shock waves beyond the Arab-Israeli confrontation. Questions are being raised at the White House and with Russia about Moscow's long-range

Israeli settlement.

One prospect White House aides see is that moderate Arab regimes in an area that provides the bulk of Europe's and Japan'e oil might be threatened by radical Arab forces led by an Egypt freed for adventures abroad by Soviet air defense of the Egyptian homeland. Removal of Soviet combat pilots from Egypt, as a result, has now been stated as a priority objective of American policy. There evidently is thought that some increase in the American military presence might become necessary for this purpose or to redress the balance if diplomatic means, which are preferred, fail to get the Russians to with-

For the moment, the White House emphasizes, there are no plans to increase American military forces in the area. Washington also is holding up aircraft deliveries to Israel to encourage both sides to negotiate a cettlement. But there are no signs as yet of similar Soviet restraint. Unless it emerges, Mr. Nixon has made it clear what his response

"Once the balance of power shifts where Israel is weaker than its neighbors, three will be a war," he said. "Therefore it is in the United States' interests to maintain the halance of power. . . . We will do what is necessary to maintain Israel's strength vis-a-vis its neighbors. Not because we want Israel to be in a position to wage war-that isn'tbut because that is what will deter its neighhore from attacking it."

It is evident that a critical moment-both of danger and opportunity-ie at hand, Mr. Nixon is making it clear that progress in the peace talks and a halt in the Soviet build-op of military power in Egypt must come soon or some American response will occur. It is a warning Moscow and Cairo would be unwise to dismiss lightly, for the American and general Western interest in the Middle East is incomparably greater than that in Cambodia and Vletnam.

Nowadays the principal Soviet diplomatic preoccupation is China and its attitudes in Southeast Asia, the Middle East and Europe are all related to that fact. Moscow is worried lest Chinese revolutionary penetratioo among Arab guerrillas upset governments with which the ments of offensive weapons.

The third area, Europe, is of specially urgent importance to Russia. It cannot wholly devote its political and defensive attentions eastward to the troubled Chinese border until assured there is no risk of danger in the West. In that light one must regard two very recent developments.

In secret negotiations, Moscow obtained Bonn's tentative agreement to accept the existing status quo including the Oder-Neisse Line and to forego all but peaceful means of settling problems. This pledge would be supplemented by many, Poland and Czechoslovakia. Such a deal, which will stir an enormous political storm along the Rhine before it is formally en ed, would guarantee the U.S.S.R. against trouble with NATO by removing the main point of argu-

If—and that is the key word for all these negotiations—a Moscow-Bonn understanding is ratified, the proposed European security con-ference becomes feasible. The fact that it has been accepted in principle by NATO and the Warsew Pact implies that a measure of understanding already exists.

Thus, suddenly, the diplomatic icejam gives signs of breaking. Perhaps there is no real movement yet but there is a great deal of noise. If there is a breakthrough in one area, moreover, the momen-tum may spill over elsewhere. But this is a time for particular caution. The formulas apparently now being contemplated could affect global destinies for decades.

'Go to the Ant!'

By Joseph Alsop

FUSHERS ISLAND, N.Y.—Casual reading on a holiday weekend seldom produces anything memorable, but this weekend has been different. It even caused hurried resort to the Bible, to find the Book of Proverbs' pithy remark on the subject of ants:

"Go to the ant, thou shuggard; consider her ways, and be wise."
This, unusual consultation of holy writ was stimulated by a report on leaf-cutting ants and their fungus gardens, by Michael M. Martin of the University of Michigan. The report, in Science magazine, is not very encouragingly entitled. "The Biochemical Basis of the Pungus-attine Ant Symbiosis"; but everything but the title is so full of wonder and deemptation today to pass on the blg news about ants.

Attine ants, then, are the group of species more commonly known as leaf-cutters, by those who use pet names for ants. They flourish on the fringes of the tropics of the Western Hemisphere; and they may well be the most efficient farmers the world has ever known. An ant hill of one of the more advanced species of leaf-cutting ants can easily contain several hundred gardens, each mainly composed of the fungus which is the ants' only form of food. The gardens are spongy balls, up to a foot in diameter, of the leaf material that nourishes the fungus. plus the dense mass of filaments of the fungus itself.

Ants' Gardening

The ants' gardening is elaborately specialized as well as efficient. Bits of leaves and flowers are harvested in the forest, and brought back into the ant hill. They are carefully prepared by chewing, to make a good growing medium. They are also pre-fer-

As one would expect, the leafcutting ants resemble the Japanese and Chinese, the most efficient human farmers, in using their own manure on their crops. Finally, once the bit of leaf has been properly chewed up and manured, the ants set out tiny bit: of fungus on the leaf fragment, in the exact manner of gardeners setting out of the evolutionary process that cuttings, to start new plants. Thus produced the leaf-cutters and their the fungus gardens are always rich in new growth.

If this is not wonderful enough, there is the matter of the fungi the ants grow in their gardens. These are kinds of fungus so immensely specialized that, outside the ant gardens, they are not known to exist.

They are feeble, too. Outside the ant gardens, where these fungi flourish so exuberantly, they cannot be made to survive very long, even when provided with all inxuries and safeguards of modern laboratory cultore. Here one thinks of man's more specialized domestic plants and animals that can hardly survive for a single generation without men to help them along.

Nor is this the end of the wonder thet surrounds the microworld of the leaf-cutting ants and their gardens. Dr. Martin and his col-leagues at Michigan University began to look into the leaf-cutters, because they thought the ants must produce something like an antibiotic to protect their gardens' fungi from hacterial enemies and other fungi with stronger, less-demanding habits of growth.

Marvelous Specialization

They were after a new penicillin, in fact; but here they were disappointed. Instead, they discovered that even the guts of the leaf-cutter ants are also specialized in a most marvelous manner, Thus the ants' manure includes the exact enzymes needed to break down vegetable proteins, in the exact manner that most stimulates the growth of the unique fungi they grow in their gardens.

In consequence, the fungi are also enabled to digest the leaf fragments' cellulose—the woody substance composing what may be called the skeleton of every plant... and so nothing at all is wasted. And this is an even more astonishing way of converting cellulose into food than that used by the termites, whose guts are full of micro-organisms which actually do the main job of digesting the wood that termites eat.

There is more in all this, surely, than simple wonder and delight. Consider, for example, the beautiful exactness, the elegant economy. of the whole balance with nature of the leaf-cutters' system of subsistence. How different from the system used by modern man, who greedily depletes with one hand the whole --- rid's stock of raw materials, and with the other hand piles up junk and refuse so rapidly that the whole environment is in danger.

Then consider, too, the sheer awe way of life. If God is in trut. dead, then evolution is the biolo gists' substitute. But this proces: too, is being grossly and brutall deformed by man's unthinkir depredations upon life-giving na

The Pope and Partisans

Leaders of armed rebellion against properly constituted governments have a certain vogue in various parts of the world, but it is odd to find them cherished in the Vatican. Moch bitterness has been aroused, not only in Portugal, by the news that on Wednesday last Pope Paul VI received in audience three such leaders of the forces now seeking to "liberate" the Portuguese territories in Africa. It is not to be eopposed that the pope has in any way encouraged the bloody methods adopted by the revolutionaries, but his action will certainly be interpreted, or misinterpreted, as showing sympathy with their aims. With all respect for motives which may be taken as those of an all-embracing charity, we can hardly escape the conclusion that on this occasion His Holiness has been singularly ill-advised. -From the Daily Telegraph (London).

American public, via both telefederal collection and dissemination of visioo and radio, had an unparalinformation on the activities of private leled opportunity to see and hear a President as he really is-or at least as close to what he is as it is possible to get. True, both Presidents John F.

Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson used the network interview technique bot their performances were subject to editing before being shown, which is a mite different than what President Nixon did. Of course, Mr. Nixon went on the air not out of charity toward the networks. He had some things he wanted to say, some things he wanted to explain. Aside from his opening armouncement of David Bruce's new post as Paris peace negotiator, the President was at the comparative mercy of his three

The Questions

Of the 24 questions asked, 21 were about Indochina, three about the Middle East and none about such other world problems as the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks. NATO, the growing East-West dialogue in Europe, not to mention Latin America, Africa, international economics and other areas which fall under the prescribed heading of foreign affairs for the inter-

To non-Americans, the concentration must surely have proved what so many believe: the United States is almost totally preoccupied with Vietnam. It is.

Mr. Nixon said that he had chosen the Wednesday format because it allowed what press conferences seldom allow, the follow-up question. He got a painful lesson in just that when the interviewers On the first point, he finally had Oval Office at the White House to disclose that he intended to to try to hear what President leave open the possibility of going back into Cambodia, even if he cause of his polio, had to say about had no present plans to do so. A prepared statement or address would never bring oot such a point. On his legal powers-a question Mr. Nixon appeared not to bave anticipated despite a day of briefmuddy area of his powers as commander-in-chief. Here he made his own case badly.

Stimulating Congress What he said on these two points is likely to stimulate further congressional discussion on how to curb presidential powers. Much of what else Mr. Nixon said also was revealing, especially the note of power politics which ran so strongly through his re-marks on both Indochina and the Middle East. The point here is not whether this approach to foreign policy is right or wrong-that an ancient debate-but how clearly Mr. Nixon exposed to wide nublic view just how he views the balance-of-power concept. Presidential press conferences from F.D.R. on, have generally revealed the nature of the man. FDR. was clever, suave. Harry Truman shot from the hip. Dwight Eisenhower tangled his syntax unmercifully but nonetheless he conveved what really was in his mind. John F. Kennedy was clever, bright. Lyndon Johnson often was too clever for his own good. If the public learned much about these men from their press conference appearances, especially by way of radio and television, the presidents used the vehicle, with varying degrees of success, to get over to the public their aims and ideas. It is a two-way street, as it should be.

Mr. Nixon's latest format ought to be continued with panelists from the written press as well as from radio and television. He ought, ico, to have more frequent press conferences.

Democracy is communication and whether you like or don't like any particular occupant of the White points: whether he would never more about him and how his mind send troops back into Cambodia works.

Sagging Prices, Widening Spreads Prevail in Pessimistic Market

By Condon Bakstansky

PARIS, July 5,- Eurobonds remained an unpopular subject of everything last week-conversation, trading, issuing, you

Prices slipped again oo the secondary market and apreads between bid and asked prices widened. Dealers battened down the hatches for what looks like a long, dreary summer.

Under present erratic conditions, what buyers were showing up—and there were very -were after the highest quality U.S. bonds. Dealers said some were looking at high-yield heavily-discounted convertibles. carrying the possibility of a quick profit io case of a turn-op on Wall Street. And a few were spotted picking over lowcoupon, higher-rated straight debts, also trading at substantial discounts.

There were no new issues save the announcement of a private 60 millioo guilder placement by the Dutch financing subsidiary of General Telephone & Elec-

Cie. Française des Pétroles and Dunlop, both with plans for deutsche mark issues, are apparently going to have to wait until some West German do-mestic needs are taken care of. No issue date has been aonounced for either flotation.

At one point, there were even reports that market giant White Weld was no longer making prices. White Weld says this was simply a misunderstanding aod that they are indeed making markets. But the very willingness to accept the report was a sign of how jittery the market has become.

Not that the picture is completely grim. In the absence of any subsequent issues, Conti-nental Oll's recently-floated 91/2s due '85 were trading at just around the issue price of 88, for a yield of over 93/4 percent on the double a rated

And the two floating rate issues from Italy's ENEL and PepsiCo are quoted at 99 1/8 and 88 7/8 bid respectively. These issues, which some questioned for coming to the traditional bond market with what is basically a money market packaging, are thus close to living up to their promise of staying near par, preserving the investor's capital position.

The advantage in these sixmonth roll-over issues is liquidity, and the guaranteed 3/4point spread over the inter-bank rate which allows many invest-ors to fund the bonds short-

The past year's heavy weight-ing of financing in favor of the short-term is being looked at uncomfortably by a number of analysts.

In the United States, Chase Manhattan Bank figures show that state and local govern-meots, which in 1968 went more than four to one in favor of long-term debt bad such problems with the soaring interest rates of 1969 that debt raising became about equally divided between the two ends of the market. Prospects at the Year's Midpoint Lukewarm For Stocks and Economy; Better for Bonds

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, July 5 (NYT).... At the midpoint of the year, prospects for the stock market and the economy seem, at best, rather lukewarm. But the bond market, which has been rising lately, offers more hope. A random sampling of opinion among securities analysts and economists in recent days turned up little enthusiasm oo the outlook for stock prices and geoeral husiness conditions before the latter part of 1970. Conversely, however, there appears to be no great concern thet etther area will develop any fresh, pronounced downturn.

The general consensus is that the market and the economy will proceed rather sluggishly for perhaps another quarter and then gradually gain strength and nower.

If the economy is to reverse course fairly soon-as many observers expect-consumer spending will have to perk up per-ceptibly and the bubbling inflationary pot will have to simmer down.

If the stock market is to generate some sustained upward momentum, there will have to be signs of a reviving economy, lower interest rates, moderation of the wage-price thrust, the absence of adverse political and international news and, especially, the promise of higher corporate earnings.

Consumer Is King

As always in the huge American economy, the consumer is king, His psychology and spending habits will largely determine the pattern and the progress of the economy and the stock market in the oext six mooths. Consumer spending accouots for some two-thirds of the gross national product which is now approaching the record annual rate of one trillion dol-

With disposable personal in-come rising by perhaps 8 percent this year because of government and private pay increases, enlarged social security benefits and the expiration of the federal surtax last week, the American public is in a position to increase spending signifi-cantly—and thus bolster a broad spectrum of business—if inspired by a confident attitude on the

The end of the 5 percent surtax slone will pump some 82 billion into consumer pockets for spending or saving. Collectively, the sum is impressive but individually it amounts to little —about $1.20 a week for the man with four tax deductions earning $100 a week, about $2.70 for the man earning $300 a week and about $11 for the man in the $1.000-a-week bracket.

NEW YORK, July 5 (NYT) .-- Investors' bopes that the long decline of stock prices oo the American Stock Exchange would end last week were dashed as the index dropped 0.27 point to end at 19.95.

Volume declined sharply to 8.309,995 shares compared with 15,008,175 the preceding week. Part of this, bowever, could be attributed to the pre-july 4 boilday on Friday.

Equity Funding and Asamera Oil continued to head the most-active list. Equity Funding, trading 209,600 shares, closed at 19, down 5-8. Asamera Oil, with volume of 178.200, closed at 10 1.2, also off 5.8. Third most active was Deltona Corp., a Florida land development company. It lost, 1 3.8 to close at 15 5.8. on 164,500 shares.

Several companies reported sharply lower earnings for the latest quarter. They included Poloron Products, maker of leisure goods and furniture, and Altamil Corp., fabricator of aluminum air frames and truck equipment.

The slump was also opparent in the over-the-counter market. The National Quotation Bureau Index ended last Thursday at ek ago ended Friday, an even uring two weeks ago when the n two weeks was about 8 percent. force of h Fund ed States Trust Company, on prospects for the economy seem-ed to typify the current thinking of many of his colleagues. "I feel we're not likely to see much strengthening for 3 while yet," he said. "We way have a modest gain in the fourth quarter but the 1971 recovery will not be very strong either. There are two sets of forces at work that may tend to balance themselves out." Elements of strength cited by the prominent bank economist included the indications of a sizable increase in the money supply now in progress, the expectatioo that overall federal spending will be rising somewhat and the continuing gains in personal disposable income.

Olisetting factors are the un-certaintles about the war, inflation and the economy that have been plaguing the public. The corporate liquidity situation that has induced a great deal of caution on the part of lenders, the possibility of more labor strikes this summer and fall, and the likelihood of further reductions in defense

Effect on Market

The presence of so many conflicting forces in the economy will tend to minimize the movenient of the stock market for the balance of 1970, according to many leading securities analysts and mutual fund portfolio managers.

In the first half of this year. the market suffered a sharp decline. The Dov-Jones industrial steck average plunged from 800 at the start of the year to closing low of 631 at the end May and has since rebounded ontinued on Page 11, Col. 31

Bond Sales on the New York Stock Exchange

The 1970 money survival course.

Real Estate. But skillfully balanced with securities to give you financial stability, capital growth and liquidity. Even when the market slumps.

U.S. Investment Services has two financial programs which employ that balance, taking advantage of the currently prosperous real estate situation.

Heavier in real estate investments now, United States Investment Plan continues to return fixed rates. 84% for a two year plan and up to 114% on a twenty-four year program.

No one has ever lost a cent with USIP. And while most mutual funds, 100% dependent on securities, are being severely crippled by market lows, United Growth Fund maintains a 37% gain over the last two years. And stands 11% ahead of the Dow Jones average from January 1, 1970.

So there's no need to panic.
Based on this demonstration of success, the management of both USIP and UGF confidently look forward to the future and even greater performance.

Eurobonds

Then again, Salomon Brothers & Hutzier estimates a spectacular 37 percent leap in short - term, unsecured commercial paper outstanding for U.S. corporations in the first five months of this year alone. In Europe, it becomes much more difficult to pin down the size of the movement, but educated guesses put the amount of short to medium term dollar debt privately arranged this year at upwards of $1 billion, well above previous years.

The question is what happens this has to be turned Teamsters' 13% Pay Rise Held Biggest Ever in U.S.

WASHINGTON, July 5 (WP). A new national contract will bring nearly half a million members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters anhual pay increases averaging nearly 13 percent a year over

It is believed to be the biggest percentage increase ever negotiated nationwide by a major labor union.

But the implications of the agreement concluded Friday go. far beyond the pockets of the It is a stunning blow to Presdent Nixon's hopes of abating he fires of inflation. The wage restraint for which ar. Nixon pleaded in his economic speech two weeks ago cems more remote than ever. The $1.85 in teamster hourly wage increases over 39 months 's a target that leaders of other arge unions—particularly the Juited Auto Workers, whose ontract talks begin this sumier-can ignore only at their vn peril.

Louis Peick, secretary-tres-urer of Chicago Teamsters' ocal 705 and the man regardd as primarily responsible for pulling off the union coup, is uddenly a prime contender to rucceed James R. Hoffa, still resident of the country's largat union although he is in a federal penitentiary.

General vice-president Frank 5. Fitzsimmons, operating head of the union in Hoffa's absence, s expected to stand for the job it next year's convention and here has been speculation about its challengers, if any.

Ford Drops Plan to Install Safety Airbags in '71 Models

DETROIT, July 5 (NYT).— The Ford Motor Company, thich had planned to put an irbag safety device in a "71 ar, has abandoned the project ecause the device: Might have killed children

So ICC is in the process of of-fering for each $1,000 face value bond one $600 new bond carrying 21 warrants exchange-able for the common stock at $16 to $25 a share, depending on the exercise date.

So far, ICC says it has commitments from holders of $12.5 million worth of the old bonds compared with the minimum $10 million they had set for

By Frank C. Porter

Actually the new contract is roughly a 50 percent improve ment over the pact negotiated in early April by Mr. Fitssim-mons and Trucking Employers Inc., which represents some twothirds of the country's road carriers. This provided for $1.10 in wage increases over 36 months —and : 25 considered unusually big at the time.

But the Chicago Teamsters and the independent Chicago Truck Drivers Union rejected the national formula and held out for $1.65 over a three-year contract. There followed a 12week strike and lockout in the Chicago area which the Chicago Association of Commerce estimated cost the city and the Midwest generally more than $1.5 billion in lost business and Teamsters in some other areas -notably Los Angeles, St. Louis and Cleveland—also resisted the national contract but epposition outside Chicago crumbled and the rank and file ratified it.

Friday, Mr. Peick, Teamster vice-president Ray Schoeseling and other Chicago negotiators won their goal of $1.65, over 36 months.

A letter-of understanding between the national union and the employers stipulated that if any employer signed a contract for more than the April formula of $1.10, the national contract would be renegotiated.

Thus Mr. Fitzsimmons and other national union leaders were on hand for the final Chicago negotiations. They and the employers applied the Chicago terms to the existing agreement, raising the ante another 20 cents to $1.85 to cover the extra three-months of a 39-month contract. ...

The $1.85 covers only wages. The total package, including fringe benefits is considerably more, but how much more neither of the parties seems to know. For example, it includes 84 a week per employee for pension fund payments and an equal amount for welfare ($5 each in Chicago).

Citing Faults in Design problem." Mr. Frey said, but the instrument panel damage has increased and "could be a hazard after bag deployment and deflation in multiple impact collisions."

The company is also "back" to ground zero" in attempting to develop a sensor that would blow up the bag in an accident, he said.

"Despite all the talk you hear, Ford is unaware of any supplier company which is in a position to manufacture airbag devices from production tooling," Mr. Frey said.

"It is obvious, therefore," he continued, "that a production validation program has not and cannot yet be initiated. What must be avoided at all costs, then is letting enthusiasm cause premature installations of relatively unproven and inadequately developed airbag 5ystems in future cars.

"Any system as potentially dangerous as the airbag if it madvertently fires, especially in multiple impacts, must have a system reliability better than SDacecraft."

Yauxhall Shuts Down; Lack of Components

LONDON, July 5 (Reuters).—All car and commercial vehicle output at Vauzhall Motors Ltd. plant at Luton, Bedfordshire, ceased Friday for at least one week, informed sources said.

The production halt at the Brit-ish substitizity of General Motors Corp. reflects a shortage of components resulting from strikes at Joseph Lucas Industries Ltd. and other suppliers,

The Outlook At Midpoint Of the Year

Lukewarm Prospect For Stocks, Economy

(Continued from Page 9) to its present level of 689.14, Bryant M. Hanley, a portfolio Pundamental Investors Fund, said he felt the apparent peaking of interest rates "is the most significant factor for the stock market," though it may be months yet before this belps stock prices.

While stock prices were moving narrowly this week in spathetic trading, the bond market was displaying a more confident tone, with prices rising and interest rates declining. A Mixed Ration

Except for an optimistic, unhedged forecast by a prominent Wall Street economist that long-term interest rates had passed their peaks, there was little of a particularly dramatic or encouraging nature in the week's economic news, It was

Pactory orders in May rose-26 percent, the most pronounced rise in eight months, and consumer installment debt for the same month mcreased by $415 million, compared with April's advance of $296 million. Moreover, the unemployment rate for June showed a surprising decline—to 4.7 percent from the, 5 percent level of May— largely because of a big reduction in the civilian labor force. These were offset by the 23 percent drop in construction contract awards during May, the eight-year low in machine-tool orders for the same month; the dip in new-car sales during the latter part of June and the lingering worry about the busi-ness liquidity situation.

Prediction on Interest The investment banking community paid greater heed to the prediction of Albert M. Woinilower; economist for the Pirst Boston Corporation, that long-term interest rates should de-cline substantially over the com-

The credit markets have changed dramatically since June 17, the day President Nixon delivered his television address on the economy. Interest rates began declining just before the telecast, faltered a bit immeenately after it and then begun to move in tiny steps toward lower levels.

Over the last month, for instance, lelds on high-grade utility issues have moved down from 9.50 percent to 9.15 percent and the bond buyers' index of tax-exempt bond yields has declined from its record 7.12 percent level at the end of May to 5.79 percent this week For the first time in several years, there is a hard core of bond market analysts who believe the economy is now on the right track. They have concluded that inflation will lessen and interest rates will decline. Stock Market Lower

The stock market closed generally lower, with the major averages showing a rather moderate movement in fairly light trading for the pre-holiday

Declines outnumbered ad-vances in a ratio of better than two-to-one-1,092 issues ending the week with losses, 455 post-ing gains and 183 unchanged. A total of 457 stocks reached new lows for the year and only four

Among the principal market yardsticks, only the Dow-Jones industrials scored a gain, and its advance was a mere 1.30 points to 639.14. The New York Times combined average declined 4.67 to 380.63. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was down 0.55 to 72.92, and the New York Stock Exchange composite was off 0.38 to 39.64.

The lack of dramatic news developments and the wary attitude of investors restricted trading volume on the Big Board to 35.1 million shares for the week's four sessions, compared with 49.4 million for the five sessions of the preceding week. Fifteen of the week's 20 most sotive issues showed minus signs, while three were changed and only two m into higher territory. The ranged from fractions to than 5 points.

BRIDGE

STOCKHOLM, July 5.—The 1970 world pair championship title was won here last night by two little-known Austrian experts. They won by the incredib-ly small margin of 4 match points, after getting the best of an exciting struggle with two Italian pairs in the last few deals of a gruelling six-day contest. The winners were Peter Manhardt, 34, an insurance agent and a vice-president of the Austrian bridge federation, and Pritz Babsch, 37, a civil engineer, both of Vienna.

One of the Italians who lost by a hairsbreadth was Benito Garozzo, of Rome, many times a world champion as a member of the famous Italian Blue Team. He and his partner, Federico Mayer, also of Rome, were fourth in the last world pair championship, held in Amsterdam in 1966.

The other Italians were two physicians from La Spezia, William Saulino and Italo Zanasi, who had held the lead for several rounds earlier in the contest. They regained the lead going into the final session, lost it again, and made a final effort which was not quite good enough.

The leading scores 1st, Babsch-Manhardt with 26,634 points; 2nd, Garozzo-Mayer, 26,630 points; 3rd, Saulino-Zanasi, 26,561; 4th, Jeff Westhelmer of New York and Ira Rubin of New York, 25,071; 5th, Eric Murray and Sam Kehels of Toronto, 25,017.

The diagrammed deal gave Garozzo and Mayer the lead for the first time, five boards bement, Garozzo sat South, and bid three no-trump after his left-hand opponent had opened the bidding with three hearts. West led the five of hearts, a slight eccentricity, and East won with the king and shifted to the diamond jack. The declarer won with the queen and digested the news about the discarded a heart.

The only hope now was to develop chibs, so Garozzo led the deuce from his hand. This was the crucial moment: When West put up his queen there was no longer any defense. South could not be prevented from making five club tricks, three diamond tricks and either a heart or spade for 117 points to the Italian pair.

A CERTAIN WORLD. A Commonplace Book. By W. H. Auden. 438 pp. A William Cole Book. Viking, 816 Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

IN his foreword to "A Certain World," W. H. Auden writes that "biographies of writers, whether written by others or themselves, are always super-fluous and usually in had taste" because "a writer is a maker, not a man of action." Mr. Auden is right, of course; and his words should be stamped, like a medical warning, on the spines of all future literary biographies, especially those that confuse politicking, style-set-ting, hunting, fishing, drinking and going insane with the pro-fession of writing. But are there then no alternatives to plowing one's way through an interesting writer's published and unpublished works, to sifting his imagery and his collect-ed letters and bills, in order to understand his possessions and creative urges? Judging from "A Certain World," there is at least one: that is to ask writers to produce commonplace books before their time is up.

Commonplace books? According to William Cole, who has published Mr. Adden's "A Certain World" as the first of a series / commonolage book is an anaotated personal anthology"—which was commonly compiled in the 18th and early 19th centuries, when print was still cool, books were not so readily available as now, and people borrowed from one another and cepied out their favorite passages. Anything goes in a commonplace book, from puns to poetry to recollected nursery rhymes. As long as each entry has special meaning to the compiler and so long as he records his responses. For Mr. Auden, who has arranged his entries alphabetically from Ac-cidle to Writing, "this compila-tion is a sort of autobiography," a map of his mindscape.

Where does it lead us? One can travel the territory a dozen ways: the only route to be avoided is the one that leads straight through from front to back cover, for the scenery changes so suddenly and so often that only a compulsive literary sightseer, or a book re-viewer, would not come down with mental bends from traveling so.

One can, for instance, go in search of the more obscure corners of Auden's mind-stop at Acronyms, Anagrams, Angelology, Bands, Brass, Bores, Curtain Lines: Diaries, Fate of the Obscure In; Dons, Humor of; Drinking Songs; Echoes; Glossolalia; Hosts; Humor, Scatological; Hurdy-Gurdy; Opera, Soep; Phrase Books, Foreign; Puns: Spoonerisms; and Words, One will generally find that Mr. Auden knows older, and more charming, anecdotes and instances than most of us do and that he keeps such es-sential frivillies brief and in their place.

Of one can four the monuments Aging Beauty, Femi-nine Childhood, Conscience, Death, Stating, God. Hell; Love Romaniic; Man: Mar-riage; Nature: Pleasure; Prayer Science, Time, War-and World, End of the Ou will generally find these selections unfamiliar and unpredict able, and the attitudes express ed in them irreverent where plety is the rule, and vice very Needless to say. Mr. Auden ha read widely in his long lifetime and forgotten nothing.

One can visit his well-stocked menagerie, or take the same ments in his venerable Prote tant Church. One can climb his European Alps, tread his English terrain, step into the mouth of Vesuvius or go down a lead mine. Or one can star home in an armchair and ten ple what amounts to a super anthology of poetry, or task the sting of his selected appo

One learns that among h favorite poets are the Roberts-Bridges, Frost and Graves-Thomas Hardy D. H. Lawrence (of "Birds, Beasts and Flowers"), Walter de la Mare, Ma rianne Moore and William Carlos Williams ("In His Las Period"), although he has no included them all perhaps to leave space for all the pre-Renaissance Anons he includes And one will find that he favors the prose of C. S. Levn Goethe, Ruskin, G. K. Chester ton, A. N. Whitehead, Simon Weil and Bruno Bettelheim with a dollop or two of Florence Andland (yes, the mother of Errol Flynn's last girl friend to keep the nightmare straigh His dreams have heavens and hells that do not appear i most anthologies.

But the best part of the trip is where the textual column narrow down to signal that we have come to Auden's ove words on the various subject: (The publisher states that these parts make up a third of the book, but it seemed like less to me-perhaps because they wen by so fast. Here we get a pic ture of a rigorously trained intelligence gently lamenting as pects of the modern age (the death of classical education and the reform of the Liturgy. highly skeptical of politics and engage art, obviously fascinate with animals and nature, ar yet very tough on scientifi methodology.

A careful reading leads much further-to a picture Auden's heart and mind sensibilities—but further mary in this space would only to caricature. Intensified Drive at Kennedy Nets Few Drugs

By Grace Lichtenstein

NEW YORK (NYT).—On a typically busy Friday recently, 9,451 passengers passed through the customs gates at Kennedy International Airport, where a stepped-up baggage inspection system designed to etem the flow of narcotics has been in effect since early June.

Some 3,300 of those passengers had their bags thoroughly examined. Several were subjected to a personal search. One drug smuggler was caught. He was charged with hringing in a half-ounce of cocaine, concealed in a package found in his shirt pocket.

The activity that day illustrated the problems the Bureau of Customs faces in its nationwide drive against drugs, first announced in January.

Commissioner of Customs Myles J. Ambrose testified before a congressional committee here that so far the hureau has not made any "significant" gains curbing heroin smuggling. In the first 24 days of the drive. he said, a little more than one kilogram of heroin (about 2.2 pounds) has been seized.

Steps in Campaign As part of the campaign the bureau has taken the following

 Added 60 percent more inspectors to its force at Kennedy Airport, bringing their total to 350. More customs agents, both plainclothesmen and uniformed guards, have niso been ndded.

• Increased the number of haggage inspections from 25 percent of travelers returning from abroad to 35 percent.

· Prepared a leaflet for travelers who may be delayed, explaining why more thorough inspectors are needed to combat narcotics smuggling.

 Placed new emphasis on narcotics identification and detection in its training courses for customs employees. At Kennedy Airport, initial indications are that while the drive has not created as many passenger delays or complaints as anticipated, neither has it produced any marked increase

George K. Brown, director of customs operations at the airport, said recently that "the results have been satisfactory."

He explained that if the program had not yet netted many drug smugglers, it still acted as a deterrent, "We have made it very evident that it would be difficult for them at J.F.K.

However, several of Mr.

UP-Airline passengers await their turn at the international arrivals building at Kennedy International Airport. Customs personnel has been expanded because of strict searches being made for drugs.

Brown's inspectors privately criticize their task as a hopeless

"They're spending all that money and they've got nothing much to show for it," said one experienced inspector, re-ferring to a supplementary appropriation of $8.75 million the Customs Bureau received for the battle against drugs.

"They'll tell you about 10 seizures in one week, but they don't tell you that nine of them were hipples who had maybe marijuana cigarette on them," he continued. "It's the old statistics game."

One top official at the airport acknowledged that 'we're getting marijuana, hashish, cocaine, but not much heroin." He said that before the summer was out he expected the number of seizures to quadruple, as additional agents and newly trained inspectors came on the Other customs men complain that despite official disclaimers there is little cooperation on drug seizures between their agency is branch of the Treasury Department) and the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, a branch of the Justice Department.

One inspector calls the relationship "a healthy rivalry," noting that when Narcotics Bureau agents make large seizures it spurs customs men to improve their own record.

Recent large seizures of co-caine and hashish by customs men at Kennedy Airport were "cold," that is, made during a routine search without benefit of an advance tlp, according to в spokesman for the Customs Bureau. Ninety-flve percent of customs drug seizures are "cold," the bureau says.

At Kennedy Airport each traveler has his passport, customs declaration and health forms checked by an inspector in the "primary" inspection aren. He is given a colored folder that he mus' hand to officials at the "control" gates after he collects his baggage.

Most of the nine colors the folders come in are meaningless, while one is the "color of the day," signifying that the primary inspector has singled the passenger out for a baggage check. The "control" inspector also has the option of directing a person to the haggage color his folder is.

In the basement of a building shaped like a mini-Pentagon instructors lecture on everything from how to detect false bottoms in suitcases to how to conduct a chemical dye test for

One recent gultar-playing graduate recorded a song about his work that is now played for all students. Called 'Busted at the F.O.E.," it tells how the "federated fuzz" on the Mexican border outwitted a band of hippies trying to smuggle marijuana across in a psychedelic Daniel J. Maillet, director of the training center, smiled and said of the song: "I think it shows the spirit of the customs

There is no doubt that morale in the service is high. The employee turnover rate is among the lowest of any government agency, Many recruits come from other civil service jobs, attracted by the Customs Bureau pay scale, (Starting pay for most agents and inspectors is $8,098 a year, for supervisory agents, $16,760.)

some passengers and not others for a search are complicated and sometimes contradictory. Certain flights are suspect because they come from what customs men call "dirty" areas -countries such as Jamaica and Mexico that they have reason to believe are major drug supply headquarters. Almost all passengers on such flights are likely to be searched. Several inspectors said they were especially wary of black Spanish-speaking women on Latin-American flights who looked "a little bit pregnant." A number of them have been caught in the past with packets of drugs strapped around their

Inspectors are always on the lookout for people who appear "married to their baggage," who are unduly nervous or who simply fit the prevailing stereotypes of the smuggler.

One young inspector, who said customs officials told him to stop wearing hell bottoms and books to work, called the stereotypes "incredible."

'If a guy's between 28 and 32 years old, flashily dres with a bleach-blonde girl, he's n smuggler," he asserted. "Or a kid with long hair and a Another plainclothesman stressed the need for even more selectivity according to type. "If it's a white male, 55 years old, from the Midwest, well dressed, first time out of tha U.S.-fine," he said. "Welcome back, sir, go right out. I'm not interested in him. I'm not interested in a young girl who's been away two months. I'm not interested in old couples." -Other customs men disagree. They point out that huge quantities of narcotics have turned up in the bags of ordinary-looking businessmen and old ladies.

"Some of the most beautiful people in the world pass through those doors," said Leonard Simon, a supervisor, pointing to one of the small, bare search rooms facing the baggage belts. Customs men insist they are not out to "get" youths in "hippie" clothes. "It might be our son," said Philip Doukas, tha chief agent at Kennedy. Heroin couriers, be added, are a different breed. "They're your criminal element." Some customs men at Kennedy Airport are worried that long delays for inspections will occur later in the tourist season. "The public blames us when the lines are too long. They don't realize the damage drugs are doing to the country." said
